Meet the Founder

My name is Jodie, I am a Beauty Therapist, Aesthetic Practitioner, Assessor, Teacher and IQA. I have worked in the industry for over 25 years continually learning new techniques and products, I have now even developed my own semi-permanent makeup & microneedling machines which can be purchased from the website.

I like to think of myself as friendly and approachable to all my students and clients.

My clinic was based at my house, up until Jan 2024. As I had always been based opportunity, home I kept my prices lower than most training academies and salons whilst still using the best products on the market. I like to make my students feel at ease as well as my clients and like to build up a good relationship with them. Even though we have upgraded to bigger premises, we have still kept our prices competitive, we moved purely to give our students more aftercare support, therefore when learning aesthetics there is always room for keep in touch days which are free of charge. I like to make my lessons fun and interactive covering all learning styles.

I started off in the beauty industry at just 15, first I worked in my local beauty salon, then going further afield to London and worked for a well-known, high end salon, progressing onto being a supervisor. I was always eager to strive and do the best I could and felt I had gained everything out of that job role, therefore it was time to move on, so at 18 I then got a job for Steiner on cruise ships working in their spa. This was such a great opportunity and I learnt so much about high end treatments, retail & customer service, it's something I would highly recommend to therapists who have the freedom to go. Once that journey ended, I went back into salons and started a mobile business on the side.

After my first daughter in 2009 I decided it was not cost effective to work in salons so Fakealicious® was born!!! Once my 2nd daughter was born in 2012 I got into Teaching & I loved it! I went from working in FE colleges, to private training academies. Although I loved working at other institutions, I just have always preferred working for myself and doing what I believe is the best thing for the students, so the training side of Fakealicious® started in 2015.

I love training and keeping in touch with my students after their training, I have various whatsapp groups that students are added to for support and guidance once their training is complete. I genuinely want all my students to do well!!

Meet the Trainer

My name is Kayleigh, I am a Beauty Therapist, Aesthetics Practitioner, Teacher and Assessor. I started my journey into the industry straight after leaving secondary school in 2013 and successfully completed my Level 2 Ofqual Regulated Qualification in beauty treatments. From there I slowly built up a clientele carrying out facials, waxing, tinting and nails alongside my full-time job.

I met Jodie in 2019 after booking on to a couple of facial courses, as I really wanted to pursue a career in beauty and aesthetics full-time. At the start of 2023 I saw that Jodie was hiring for an assistant, so I took the plunge and applied for the job, and here I am!

I have since completed a number of different CPD courses and Ofqual Regulated Qualifications which have enabled me to gain extensive knowledge and upskill in the treatments that I offer and now teach.

I offer a range of treatments including all things skin, wood therapy and body contouring, laser, body piercing, ear irrigation, skin boosters, skin tag removal, lashes, brows, tinting and waxing.

I currently teach Level 2 and 3 Beauty, a range of facial treatments, laser hair removal and skin rejuvenation, ear irrigation, body piercing, wood therapy and body contouring, lash lift, defined brows and brow lamination, tinting, waxing and nails.

My passion is skincare, I could talk about skin all day long!

I love my job because I get to meet new people every day and continue to build, alongside Jodie, an amazing network of practitioners who support and uplift each other.

Looking forward to meeting you!

OUR TRAINING CENTRE

What is the difference between Ofqual Vocational Qualifications & ABT or CPD courses?

CPD is known as 'Continued Professional Development' training courses are there for people within the industry to completed and stay up to date with new methods and new treatment which come out. With CPD or accredited courses there is no regulations with regards to the content of the subject matter, due to this it is really important to pick a training provider who does their own quality assurance and offers continued support. CPD courses are accredited courses which are fully insurable after training, they were initially made available to learners who had already completed an Ofqual Qualification as a way of doing 'continued professional development' in a particular subject matter, whether that was hair, beauty, barbering etc.

Over the years they have now been made available to everyone, meaning that you can attend courses with no prior experience and still gain your insurance, this is great in some ways, you may not be the studying type, you just want a little side job around the kids or your current job, this has made it a great route for people that are passionate about beauty but could never go to college to study the level 2 or 3 beauty.

However, there can also be some cons, such as the learner leaving without actually gaining much knowledge as the training centre is not regulated or just doesn't care if the student actually learns anything, unfortunately a lot of learners can leave feeling confused and with little to no aftercare support.

Regulated Qualifications are there for learners to meet the criteria and reach the correct level, to give them the education and knowledge to work professionally within the industry and progress onto further training.

What is the difference between Ofqual Vocational Qualifications & ABT or CPD courses?

Ofqual - The Office of Qualifications and Examinations Regulation (Ofqual) regulates qualifications, examinations and assessments in England. They are the regulator body that Awarding Organisations such as VTCT, TQUK, CIBTAC, Qualifi, Proqual, Focus Awards etc and they all have to answer to and comply with. Ofqual is the only government recognised qualification.

Ofqual set the qualification standards for:

- GCSEs
- A levels
- AS levels
- vocational and technical qualifications
- Apprenticeship end-point assessments

Therefore, when choosing an Ofqual regulated qualification you will have a certain amount of guided learning hours to complete your training & feel fully confident once you have passed. You will need to complete assignments, complete practical assessments on more than 1 client, which will only be passed once you're at salon standard.

Unfortunately, I have had countless students come to me with level 3 or level 4 qualifications which are not worth the paper they're written on and are accredited courses that a training academy has written up themselves, this is not a Qualification and is not recognisable in the Education sector, although you could still gain insurance. If you are ever unsure of the Qualification you have received always look for the Ofqual emblem on your certificate.

What is the difference between the Qualifications

You will notice that some qualifications are an 'award', 'certificate' or 'diploma' the difference in these are set out below

A level 3 Award is usually a smaller qualification with one to three units that usually around 30-40hrs learning time

A Certificate is again slightly longer with more guided learning hours, with 2 or more units to cover.

A Diploma is the highest qualification in the 'levels' which can be gained, training with around 100+ guided learning hours and 4 or more units to cover.

All of these Qualifications are still Ofqual approved and regulated – they are awarded based on guided learning hours and the amount of credits gained from the Qualification.

Qualifications are set in levels, some courses you can go straight in at a level 4 if you already have prior learning in that subject area.

The vocational qualification being offered, including the units are set out in this training prospectus.

Whether your qualification is classed as an Award, Certificate or Diploma, they are all Ofqual regulated & one isn't better than the other, generally therapists work up the ladder in 'levels'.

So why upgrade to a Qualification?

The reason therapists would upgrade to a level 3 or level 4 is to have a more recognisable qualification, or simply to learn more.

Upgrading also future proofs your career, new regulations will be coming to the industry soon and ensuring you have a regulated qualification ensures that you can continue working without disruption.

For instance, if you're offering a lot of facial treatments the Level 4 Skincare will give you so much more knowledge on the skin.

As the industry is starting to become more regulated Licences by your local councils are being brought into effect. When this happens they will want Ofqual regulated qualifications, this has already been brought in by many boroughs in London and is starting to filter out. Meaning if you do not have the qualification they can refuse you a licence, meaning you can gain insurance, but could not legally work if you need a licence. It is always best to check with your local authority.

If offering more advance treatments such as fillers and botulinum toxin is on the horizon for yourself, having a level 4 qualification is a must to then progress onto your level 5, 6 & level 7 aesthetics.

Having an Ofqual regulated qualification keeps you at the highest industry standard.

Training

With these Qualifications depending on which qualification you sign up for & depending on what experience you already have will depend on how many days/weeks/months you will need to attend the salon for practical training or theory work. Some courses may be home based and you only need to attend 1 practical day, whereas others you may need to come in for 1 day a week for 6 months (such as the Level 4 Skincare).

With all qualifications you will need to sit practical assessments, assignments & professional discussions.
